Elevate: Shifting Focus from Pandemic to People

If we want our people to value, nurture and care about their patients, we must first value, nurture, and care about them. This presentation will give participants the tools and skills to rejuvenate and re-energize their attention to the patient experience again by putting "people first" through a culture of resilience, empathy, kindness, and self-care.

Coaching Conversations

The ability to coach helps you increase your employees' commitment and level of engagement, and handle problems that interfere with working relationships and productivity. Coaching others makes it easier for you to achieve your own goals. During this session Robert will identify the steps of a coaching session and how to apply basic coaching techniques for performance improvement, career development, and more.

"Your Zipper is Open"...and Other Miscommunication Challenges!

One of the common threads among world class healthcare organizations is their ability to communicate intentionally, effectively, and empathetically. Daily we work with people who have opinions, values, beliefs, and needs that differ from our own. In this session Jeff will provide a process to enable attendees to exchange ideas with others, understand their perspectives, and solve problems through effective communication.
